THE ART DISTRICT

Mumbai's iconic Kala Ghoda precinct, known for its crescent-shaped layout, owes its name to the statue of King Edward VII. Unveiled in 1879, the statue was sculpted by Sir Joseph Boehm and gifted by philanthropist Albert Sassoon. Polished to a black finish, the bronze statue gave rise to the name "Kala Ghoda," meaning "Black Horse."

In 1965, amidst rising nationalistic sentiments, the statue was relocated to the Byculla Zoo. For decades, the precinct stood without a statue, yet the name endured as a testament to its history. In 2017, the area welcomed a new symbol: The Spirit of Kala Ghoda, a striking riderless black horse that pays homage to its past while embracing its vibrant present.

Funded by the Kala Ghoda Association, this new statue now anchors the heart of a thriving cultural district. The precinct, with its rich tapestry of heritage buildings, art galleries, museums, educational institutions, boutiques, cafes, and restaurants, has become one of Mumbai's most celebrated cultural hubs. Drawing visitors from around the world, Kala Ghoda seamlessly blends its colonial history with contemporary charm.

A magnet for creative talent, Kala Ghoda attracts artists, food connoisseurs, and architecture enthusiasts alike. Through the efforts of the Kala Ghoda Association—supported by funds from the Kala Ghoda Arts Festival and generous sponsors—the area has undergone remarkable transformation. Historic buildings and facades have been meticulously restored, and amenities thoughtfully improved. These initiatives have preserved Kala Ghoda's unique visual identity, ensuring it remains a vibrant and enduring cultural landmark.

Where: Cross Maidan

This installation metaphorically depicts the relationship between nature and urban development. The horse symbolizes strength and protection, while urban forests embody nature as both a guardian and potential threat—nurturing life yet capable of destruction when mismanaged, reflecting nature's dual role in modern cities.

Every Move Counts
Where: Rampart Row

This installation highlights waste management and water pollution, inspired by Nek Chand's Rock Garden. Reimagining ocean and river scrap as a symbolic chess knight, it honors the Kala Ghoda Festival and urges smarter choices. Every move impacts our planet—let's rethink waste and protect our waters together.

Reins Of Change
Where: Rampart Row

This vertical installation features four horses symbolizing women's empowerment: household strength, economic independence, professional success, and the transformative power of education. Together, they celebrate women's resilience, versatility, and their ongoing journey toward equality and empowerment.

Eco Pop
Where: DSL Garden

This dual-sided totem honors Kala Ghoda's roots and its forward-thinking ethos, celebrating 25 years of heritage and sustainable art. Crafted with a focus on design and aesthetics, it symbolizes the festival's foundation and its commitment to inspiring future generations through sustainability.

Woven Canopy

Where: Yashwantrao Chavan Centre

An immersive installation addressing textile pollution through a totem-like tree made from discarded fabrics. It symbolizes the impact of fast fashion and the potential for regeneration through sustainable practices, inspiring reflection and change.

सूत संवाद - "Dialogue of Threads" Where: Kitab Khana

This exhibition of woven wall art explores sustainability's 3Ps: People, Planet, and Profit. Showcasing eco-conscious creativity, it features captivating pieces crafted from sustainable fibers and yarns, celebrating the harmony between art and sustainability.

Buried by Trends

Where: Elphinstone College

A critique of fast fashion, media influence, and digital identity. Through vivid symbolism, it urges viewers to question consumption, media literacy, and social platforms. The Fast Fashion Ballgown serves as a striking reflection of consumer culture and its societal impact.

Your Ordinary T-shirt

Where: Elphinstone College

This installation exposes the hidden costs of fast fashion—pollution, carbon emissions, climate change, waste, and exploitation of eco-friendly practices in the textile industry.

Eyes of the Endangered

Where: CSMVS

The installation features the silent, emotive gazes of endangered species from diverse natural realms - underscoring their vulnerability and humanity's responsibility to safeguard them.

Power to the Nature

Where: CSMVS

Constructed from bamboo, the structure takes the form of a chair and shows the symbiotic relationship between humanity and the natural world.

The Circus of Modern Sins

Where: Cooperage Bandstand Garden

The 7-foot-tall Circus of Modern Sins critiques today's seven deadly sins: media illiteracy, corruption, overconsumption, apathy, digital dehumanization, corporate greed, and clout lust.

The Journey Within

Where: YWCA

An immersive installation destigmatizing therapy. Symbolic alcoves depict stages of healing: Pain (cactus plants), Broken Reflection (shattered mirrors), Calm (soothing waves), and Blooming (tree growth), inviting visitors to experience the emotional journey of therapy.
